*PLAYPACK CUE LENGTH

We are often asked for a "regulation size" billiard table. Regulation size simply means the play area is twice as long as it is wide, measured from the nose of the cushions. Thus, all the tables we sell are "regulation size."

When choosing a pool table, you will first want to make sure the table fits in the room with enough space around the sides so that the cue doesn't hit your wall when addressing a ball at the rail. The measurements above show you the minimum dimensions needed, with options for different size cues.

The next thing to consider is the purpose of the table and who will be playing. Generally speaking, the smaller the table, the easier the game will be. If you plan to go pro, by all means, have at the 9' table, the size used in professional tournament play! If you simply want to hang out with friends and family, 8' is the most popular residential size. Most pool tables found in bars are 7', so they can turn over more games.

A pool table can be a fantastic item to bring together friends and family, and should be viewed as a piece of furniture that accentuates your room and style. When choosing the perfect pool table for your family, we recommend making sure it fits in the room, make sure you like the style and finish, and then make sure the table is a size everyone can play on - in that order. We're here to assist you with any questions and would be happy to put together a room layout for you. You should experience a lifetime of fun with your purchase!
